Three years ago, by accident I scrolled onto a page texting about the beauty of an Epiphyllum (I called Cereus). This was the beginning of a friendship. I mentioned I had the white, didn't know there were other colors, esp. Red. This lady sent me two cuttings by mail, and I was beyond excited that now I, too, will have red blooming cereus. In between our texting, I read where her husband had taken his journey to his forever home. My friend NELL and I continued texting and not once did she mention about being ill. And once again, during my brief absence on FB, I ran across one of my group's ladies, Karen, which indicated something else was wrong....and merciful God in Heaven has invited another angel to her forever home to rejoin her husband of fifty plus years. This has sadden my heart as I did not expect to see her name in big print that I have lost a dear friend, but her memory lingers on to the two cuttings she sent to me because she knew from the sound of my voice, that I would love to have a piece because the flower was just so beautiful, but not as beautiful as NELL's heart and soul....I will miss her, and everyday her kindness to each of her friends is a deep reminder that life's longevity is never promised, but today is ours to enjoy with love.....
