“ I have known Page for 42+ years and I have no adequate words to express the loss of such a unique and beautiful soul. I met Page through my brother, Chris. They quickly became the best of friends in middle school, sharing their love of music, concerts, movies and often memorizing their favorite lines from hundreds of comedies (and incessantly repeating them to the point of perfection!). I am only one year older than them and had the pleasure of being included in their hilarious interactions throughout our teen years. Page and I became closer friends through high school by participating in Beta Club together and spending many hours listening to the latest and later to become, GREATEST rock bands. Page would scrutinize every intricate part of particular songs/vocal arrangements/guitar styles/drum patterns, etc. and had no reservations in sharing his opinion with anyone who asked. We lost touch for a few years completing college and starting our families but reunited our friendship with the addition of our wives and sons. When Donna entered Page's life, I was elated that they "found" each other. It was obvious to everyone who met them, that they were and ARE "soulmates". Pete and Joel soon arrived to enrich their parents' lives even more. We had many good meals together, sharing our childhood experiences with our sons. We lost my brother, Chris, in a tragic accident 28 years ago and I know Page struggled with the loss of his close childhood friend. I leaned on Page for comfort, and I feel that I provided the same for him. He truly helped me through my grieving process, and I hope in retrospect that he knew my gratitude. In recent years, Page and I had several opportunities to attend live concerts of our favorite bands that we loved in high school/college, and I'm so thankful to have these memories with him. Our hearts are torn for Donna, Pete and Joel during this mourning period and for the rest of their lives.

Rest in Peace, my friend. I look forward to "rocking out" with you when we meet again.

With love and respect,

Tony Blanchard and family
